The nerve was excised and cut in transverse seiial section from its intraocular surface backwards. The anterior chamber is deep, and there is coagulated exudate in the vitreous. The disc is cupped, and beneath it and to its nasal side there is a large exudative pitch with a crystalline shimmer, and with haemorrhage in and around it. Similar but smaller glittering patches are scattered about elsewhere. Microscopic Examination.--The cornea is normal except for some slight vacuolation of the epithelium. In the anterior chamber there are fibrinous coagula, with a few blood corpuscles and leucocytes. The corneo-iridic angle is blocked, but to a very variable degree in different sections; the blocking is, however, always more pronounced on the nasal side. It is a true adhesion by new formed fibrous tissue, but there has not yet been much atrophy or condensation, and in some cases the extreme angle is free while the iris is adherent to the back of the cornea a little farther forward, a state of things which indicates that the adhesion is of recent origin. In no situation does the adhesion reach quite as far forward as the termination of the membrane of Descemet. The iris tissue generally is loose and uninfiltated, but the vessels show thickening of their coats and proliferation of their endothelium, changes which in places cause obliteration of the lumen. Towards the root of the iris and also in the anterior part of the ciliary...
